3 Ways to Test Your Faithfulness...

The test of faithfulness in small things.

It is our level of faithfulness in the insignificant things that will indicate how we will manage the larger assignments and responsibilities.

How do you handle the assignments that you think no one will notice?

Do you disciple or mentor those who can do nothing for you?

Do you care for each person with equal compassion and attention?

It's in the small things that we are prepared for greater things ahead.

The test of faithfulness in serving another person.

The hardest instrument to play is second fiddle. A person who is willing to give wholeheartedly of oneself to see another person succeed is a person worth following. Every true leader has proven him or herself faithful in serving another person's dream. Prove your faithfulness by proving that you are willing to serve others to greatness.

Do you serve others?

The test of faithfulness in authority.

There are many places in our lives that can be used as tools to expose our level of faithfulness with authority. Authority is placed over us for our good.

Do you honor your employers? – serve your boss with a willing heart.

Are you available?

You can't have commitment phobia and be available too.

Are you an available resource?

In what ways are you making yourself available?

What can be some indicators you're not available?

Are you teachable?

Try to maintain a beginner's mind-set by keeping the following three things in mind:

1. Everyone has something to teach me.
2. Every day I have something to learn.
3. Every time I learn something, I benefit.

Do you have the traits of a teachable person?

Teachable people...

Have an attitude conducive to learning

Possess a beginner mind-set

Take long, hard looks in the mirror

Encourage others to speak to them about their lives

Learn something new every day
